CEMCWG Repository of Virtual Tools for Financial Literacy

CEMCWG financial education subgroup

The CEMCWG Financial Education subgroup aims to brainstorm best practices and develop policy guidance and practical tools for policymakers, regulators, supervisors, and other stakeholders involved in financial education programs and strategies. Financial education can build financial well-being and self-efficacy across different age groups, gender, income, and education levels, particularly during a crisis or emergency. Financial education equips low-income households with the information and skills to interact with financial services providers based on knowledge, trust, and informed choice and to align their choices with their financial goals and life stage.

The present Booklet is a repository of virtual tools available in the AFI network to complement AFI’s National Financial Education Strategies Toolkit.

Other AFI knowledge products on financial literacy, education and capability published by the subgroup are available on AFI website: www.afi-global.org/library/?search_text=education

Examples of virtual tools for financial literacy available in the AFI network

During the formulation of financial education programmes, several phases include 1) identify and prioritize relevant content, 2) identify and prioritize relevant delivery channels, 3) secure buy-in of key stakeholders, 4) develop an action plan and, 5) identify funding sources and budget. The present document presents existing delivery channels and tools from the AFI network.

The below steps are recommended in identifying and prioritizing relevant financial education delivery channels:

- Consider key factors during the selection process
- Adopt a multi-channel approach
- Customize delivery channels
- Standardize and repeat messages over all delivery channels

Delivery channels could comprise print media (e.g. brochures, newspapers, comic books, flyers on key facts), radio, TV, mobile phone (e.g. SMS), smartphone and internet (e.g. app, social media, online game, websites), community events (e.g. credit and savings group, dance troupes, road shows, street theatre), training events, workshops and in-person or virtual meetings with individuals and households (e.g. counseling).

This Booklet includes the following examples of financial literacy virtual tools:
1. Financial inclusion related websites
2. Financial education related websites
3. Booklets, leaflets
4. Virtual courses
5. Social media
6. Mobile and web applications
7. Videos
8. Other resources

The tools and resources are available in different languages (abbreviations detail in the Annex).
